These should only be used for real time events. When a change is made to a "real time event log", I need SCCM to check for this event, synchronise it on all clients, and then make a new record in the "in use" event log. I need to do this for a total of 8 event logs, 1 per day per week. My "best" idea is to: Start the event log, and make it stop at the same time each week Then when SCCM is triggered at the next minute, I check the event log to see if it has any events (by checking if there is a file with the same name as the last log, but one day before). If there is no event, log a new event, and start the log again. 82157476af
